

Sustainability and Environmental Justice in Europe

GEO 300.1: A Signature Seminar in Europe (3 credits)

August 19-28, 2018
Copenhagen, Stockholm, Inari

The Program

Sustainability and Environmental Justice in Europe is a Signature Seminar designed for students before you arrive for your semester abroad at Syracuse London. The seminar invites you to consider:

- Why is Scandinavia so well-known for its environmental efforts?
- Everyone talks about sustainability and justice - but what do they mean, really?
- Who wins and loses in 'green cities' and other 'eco-friendly' initiatives?

You will travel as a group to the Nordic countries of Denmark, Sweden, and Finland to discover how creativity valuing both heritage and innovation is supporting (or failing) environmental justice. In each of the destinations, students will directly engage with inequalities in access to clean air, food, water, energy, land, and natural spaces. You will explore how environmental crises around the globe impact Nordic communities, how the actions taken in these spaces affect peoples in other parts of the world, and how we can learn from these leaders in sustainable solutions.

After your time in Nordic urban and wild spaces, you will have the opportunity to continue your consideration of environmental justice and sustainability in Britain throughout your semester at Syracuse London.
