Your Seminar Leader

Dr Becca Farnum is an environmental activist-academic currently serving as program staff at Syracuse University London. Her doctoral research partnered with local organisations in the Middle East and North Africa using nature to bridge political divides. Past projects have involved contributing to United Nations policy on environmental peacebuilding; running an environmental educational exchange between Norway and Norfolk; and serving a stint with Michelle Obama's Correspondence Team at The White House. Her teaching focuses on inclusive learning and transformative pedagogies, supporting students to understand and purposefully impact global change.
